

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

2. We would ask the pastors and members of our churches to watch closely the action of the Congress of the United States, and whenever measures are introduced looking toward international good-will, or vice versa, that they would write personal letters to the Senators and Congressmen from their State and district, urging that they vote from the Christian point of view. Such letters have great weight.

3. We believe that the time has come when civilization must make choice between two ways for the future: the way of statesmanship or the way of battleship, the old way of settling disputes by force or the new way of settling them by justice. So far we have lived by the old way almost exclusively. There are many who are now clamoring that we persist forever in that way. "Arm," they say, for there is no other way. In our time a great throng of noble men, prophets, statesmen, teachers, poets, yes, business men and men of all callings, have seen the vision of the new way—the way of the Lord, the way of brotherhood, justice, and good-will. They are demanding that we choose international tribunals, arbitration treaties, and such judicial methods as Christian men practice among themselves. The choice must be made soon and once for all, or militarism will gain the day. We call upon the Christian men and women of the nation to rise at this time and demand that all nations learn again the first principles of the teachings of Jesus Christ, that membership in his kingdom should so bind them together in mutual love and mutual antagonism to the common foes of God and man that the thought of engaging with each other in deadly combat shall become abhorrent and impossible forever.

A Joint Anglo-German Manifesto in Favor of Peace.

The following manifesto, as reported by The Arbitrator, has been signed by the 110 Social Democratic members of the German Reichstag and 41 Labor members of the House of Commons:

The Parliaments of both Germany and England have again decided to grant the naval demands of their governments and enormously increase the burden of armaments. The representatives of the working classes of both countries—the members of the Social Democratic party in Germany and the Labor party in England—have fought against this increase and voted against it. But they are not strong enough in their Parliaments to prevent the acceptance of the military and naval budgets. Consequently the competition in armaments continues its fateful and fatal course, putting on the shoulders of the people at a time of a general rise in prices for all commodities a new and heavy burden and at the same time aggravating the danger of a dreadful war.

The workmen of Germany do not entertain any hostile feelings for England, nor do English workmen for Germany. Most determinedly they stand against all those who incite to war in both countries. They do not demand an increase in the capitalistic competition in armaments, but its abolition; not an incitement to war, but a mutual understanding between both nations.

A war between England and Germany would lead to such a catastrophe as history has never yet seen. All those who cause such a danger commit an infamous crime on humanity. The possibility of preventing this catastrophe lies in the hands of the working classes of both our countries. We, as representatives of the organized, class-conscious workmen in both countries, therefore urge the whole body of workmen both in Germany and Great Britain to join our organizations to prevent civilization and culture being pulled down into the abyss and numberless human lives annihilated.

Workmen of England and Germany! Wherever you meet you must always remember that you have an historical part to play and the general welfare of the nations to advance. Agitate and organize for the mutual understanding of peoples and for peace.

Peace Bureau's Appeal to the Powers.

The International Peace Bureau at Berne, Switzerland, issued on the 25th of October the following appeal to the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the different countries:

MR. MINISTER: We had supposed that the efforts of the world's diplomacy would be sufficiently powerful to impose upon the states interested a pacific solution of the age-long conflict which at the present moment is drenching with blood the Balkan Peninsula, and we were waiting for the hour at which we should be able to felicitate the governments on the attitude taken and the success secured by them.

Once more the peoples are witnessing the lamentable spectacle of powers armed to the teeth, at the price of yearly sacrifices which exceed twelve billions of francs, incapable of maintaining peace in the world, at the same time that Emperors, Kings, and Ministers never cease to repeat that these monstrous sacrifices are necessary in order to assure the maintenance of peace. Is your government, whose international relations have been entrusted to you, going to continue, by criminal inaction, to assume the heavy responsibility falling upon it in the war which is going on at the present time? Is it going to assume the terrible responsibility of the catastrophe with which we are menaced, and which, if it should come, would be the suicide of Europe?

We shall receive the answer that diplomacy is active; that notes are being exchanged while people are killing each other. When men fight in the street it is not customary for the authorities who are charged with preserving the public peace to write letters and deliberate. They begin by putting an end to the fight. That is what we ask you to do in the Orient.

The masses of the people who desire to live in peace are expecting from the governments an energetic attitude. They invite these governments to act without delay and without weakness. We join our voice to theirs. It must not be allowed to be said that the powers intervene only when it is a question of defending the interests of holders of bonds and the combinations of certain men of affairs and of rapacious politicians. It is useless to offer them that. What the peoples ask for in a limited form now they will demand tomorrow. Already the popular will has been strengthened by recent events. Interpolations will be